Internet/Cell Phone Safety Tips for Parents and Children

Cheezo, the yellow five foot cool cat and program mascot, and Jefferson County DA Investigators Mike and Cassandra Harris will discuss the dangers on the Internet. They found that 50% of elementary school age children have their own passwords to access the Internet. They also found that 40% of children from 6th grade through high school sleep with their cell phone. The CSOII Unit protects children from sex offenders through prevention programs and aggressive, pro-active Internet investigations. Harris and his team take their Stranger Danger Internet Stranger Program into schools, parents' groups and other organizations concerned with the safety of kids. Harris also goes online undercover, following sex offenders into areas on the Internet frequented by kids.
